Raja Ampat Marine Park is located in a very remote area of Indonesia. It and is one of the last frontiers in diving. Scientists call it the epicenter of marine biodiversity. According to Dr. Jen Veron, "The islands have the highest known diversity of reef corals for an area of its size." One famed ichthyologist, Dr. Gerald Allen counted 283 species of fish in one dive in Raja Ampat- the highest ever recorded. The convergence of the Indian and Pacific Oceans foster nutrient -rich currents for the 1,200+ species of fish and 537 corals (three fourths of all known). Among the residents of the area are pygmy seashores, Wobbegong sharks, a menagerie of brightly colored nudibranchs, schools of pelagic fish including big eyed jacks and the newly discovered 'walking' epaulette shark, usually seen on night dives on Misool Eco Resort's house reef.

The Misool Eco Resort is a small cozy, intimate resort that is known for its high quality service and superb diving. It's location in the center of the Raja Ampat National Park is destined to demonstrate to you its high concentration of marine life. The resort's chef has designed a tasty, and whenever possible, organic menu. The Western and Asian style meals are generally served buffet-style. During surface intervals, tasty afternoon snacks are offered. Village, river and bird watching tours are available.

The resort's dive center was designed with the professional photographer and videographer in mind. Dive guides lead small groups of 4-6 divers. The hotel's Rangers patrol the No-Take Zone. Taking your dive vacation at Misool Eco Resort directly supports ongoing conservation initiatives of this pristine coral universe.
